1. The Chinese Communist Volunteers' Army has established an advance headquarters near Sawon-ni (125-46, 38-32) (YC-4168) which includes a Soviet Advisors' Office staffed with 5 Soviets, and other sections, including political affairs, combat, staff officers', supply service and signal communications.
2. This headquarters is in a wooded area just east of Pongsan (125-50, 38-31) (YC-4767), which is 5 kilometers east of Sawon-ni. It occupies four underground rooms constructed of reinforced concrete and arranged in the shape of an "M". Each room is about 20 meters long and about 6 meters wide. The walls are about 1 meter thick. Underground passages connect the 4 rooms, and each room has an additional underground passage which leads to the surface. The tops of these underground rooms are about 2 meters below the surface of the ground, and small pines have been planted over them as camouflage. Trenches have been dug on all four sides of this headquarters, and one battalion is stationed there as guards. Sentries are stationed about every 30 meters along the underground passages.
